What is the HE Pan London Disability Support Services Directory?

An online resource providing information about the support services available at London HEIs for students with learning difficulties and disabilities

Why have we created the resource?

SEND reform – Impact on support available at schools, colleges and HEIs and the consistency of their offer. You're the 'customer'

Feedback from previous AHLS annual transition events for students with learning difficulties

To simplify the process of finding relevant information

- Consultation about design elements (Style, content, accessibility)
- Working across sectors to ensure the resource is relevant and meeting needs of learner life cycle
- Helping students prepare for the transition from school/college to university

Who's it for?

Students, staff and parents

- Students – Can start to take ownership of their support within HE and see how they can access it
- Parents can access information which will help them to support the student in a different way and encourage independence
- Staff can support the student in preparing for their transition: knowing who offers what and where

Student Feedback

‘They really loved the idea of the directory itself as an ‘all-in-one’ place to go to find out about the support transition into university and thought it would give them confidence when applying for support’

‘My specialist tutor team said that they thought it would be an extremely useful tool to use as an integral part of the students’ 1:1 support sessions when preparing the students for HE’

‘From a 6th form point of view the guidance you are producing is of great value. Students felt that they were being listened to by an external agency’
